

Attorney Bio

Justin Samuels is an associate in WSHB's Phoenix office, where his practice focuses on catastrophic injury, commercial and business litigation, and complex civil litigation. While attending law school at Arizona State University, Justin was a legal intern for the Arizona Attorney General's Office, Nike, and the Arizona Diamondbacks of Major League Baseball. During law school, Justin was a board member of the Sports and Entertainment Law Student Association, a representative of the John P. Morris Black Law Student Association, a student mentor for the Hispanic National Bar Association, a member of the Intellectual Property Student Association, and a member of the Volunteer Legal Assistance for the Artists Association.

Prior to law school, Justin attended the University of Arizona, where he was a letter winner on the Arizona football team. He also received academic certificates of achievement from the department of psychology, the Eller College of Management, and the department of athletics. He was a member of the student body government; an executive board member of his fraternity; a resident assistant; and a volunteer for the Arizona tutoring club, where he helped tutor at-risk youth.
